

Process for Achieving Level Three Accreditations

Requirements

To achieve level three accreditation as a starter or referee, a candidate is required to undergo three competent assessments at a Swimming Australia National Championships.

What is the process when I'm ready to be assessed as a Level Three Starter or Referee?

- Be a practicing level two (state) referee or starter.
- Make a request for assessment by a member of the national assessment panel to your state swimming association
- Your state swimming association coordinates a visit from a member of the national assessment panel at a relevant state meet. This will often be when numerous individuals are to undergo an assessment for national level competence.
- After competent assessment at this meet, candidate is appointed to a Swimming Australia Championship
- After a candidate achieves three (3) competent assessments at a national championships and completion of the Self Management for Technical Officials unit, the candidate may be awarded level three accreditation after final approval from the National Technical Swimming Committee.
